Field

Every May the ninth since forty five he stands in a still corner of a particular field and thinks a prayer for those who died in a camp in the field
off the five mile road near the house where he lived where he watched as a child starving men under guard and remembers the sound that came out of the huts this pillar of a man standing in a quiet field

Alice Allen